New rules for listeria testing

Deadly outbreak spurs tough measures

The federal government is about to unveil tough new listeria testing rules in food plants across the country, Torstar News Service and CBC have learned.

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency is overhauling its protocols to demand tighter surveillance and greater transparency around the deadly bacteria following the Maple Leaf outbreak and a joint investigation by Torstar News Service and CBC that exposed serious flaws in the food inspection system.

The outbreak, triggered by listeria-tainted cold cuts, has claimed at least 20 lives and sickened hundreds — perhaps thousands — more.

New protocols designed to give more protection for consumers will be reviewed by an expert panel of food safety experts early next month, before being approved by CFIA bosses.

The proposals include:

- Mandatory testing of plant surfaces such as countertops and meat slicers by company staff, as well as non-contact surfaces such as walls, ceilings and drains. The frequency will vary by production levels and specific processing procedures, but insiders say that surfaces that touch food will have to be tested at least once a week.
- Mandatory testing of ready-to-eat meat products by CFIA inspectors at least three times a year.
- Food will have to be quarantined and tested for listeria whenever plant surface testing turns up two subsequent positives.

The new rules will also reinstate a rule compelling companies to report a trend of positive listeria findings to government inspectors, says Rick Holley, a food safety expert at the University of Manitoba and a member of a newly formed CFIA panel of experts advising the agency on food safety.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

How positive tests slip through cracks

- The duty to inform inspectors of positive listeria tests was dropped in April, just prior to the outbreak, a Torstar News Service/CBC investigation reported last month.
- Without it, potentially alarming test results can go unnoticed by CFIA inspectors in food plants, say inspectors who spoke with Torstar News Service and CBC.

Harper, Obama speak on economy

CONVERSATION Prime Minister Stephen Harper and U.S. president-elect Barack Obama spoke about the global credit crisis, the environment and the military mission in Afghanistan in their first conversation following Obama's victory.

They shared a "warm exchange" and vowed to remain strong allies, a senior government official said of the phone call that took place yesterday, adding "(Harper) raised issues where we have common ground," the official said.

They also discussed the emergency meeting with G-20 world leaders in Washington next week to address the global credit crunch, the official said.

In downtown Toronto yesterday, Harper said the U.S. election signals a change in American policy that will better reflect Canadian hopes for the environment and Afghanistan.

"This is a tremendous, historic occasion for the United States in all kinds of ways." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Broken DNA repair system, cancer linked

BREAKTHROUGH Montreal researchers have discovered a critical cellular process that, when not working, allows the sun, cigarettes and other environmental carcinogens to cause tumour growth.

In a study released yesterday, scientists at the University of Montreal say they have found a mechanism that repairs the DNA damage that can often lead to cancer. This mechanism, they say, is broken in 50 per cent of the tumours they have looked at.

"Nobody has ever discovered this level of DNA regulation and repair — I think that's a major thing," says Elliot Drobetsky, principal author of the study. "We went on to find that it appears to be mutated in human cancers."

The study could lead to far more effective chemotherapy treatments, he said. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

'It's heartbreaking'

Hunters reveal details of discovering teen's body

The body was resting in reeds nearly as tall as the deer hunters who found it.

The hunter who stumbled upon the grim find picked up his walkie-talkie and radioed the others who were scattered around the bush.

"I found something," he said in a shaky voice. "It's a boy, 15, maybe 14. His shoes are on. There's a backpack."

They immediately knew who it was — Brandon Crisp.

He looked to be at peace — something that would be consistent with hypothermia, which some investigators are quietly speculating could well have been the cause of death.

A post-mortem is scheduled for today.

"We'd only been out there about 20 minutes," said one of the hunters, who are closely related.

> "It shouldn't have ended this way."
> One of the hunters who found Brandon Crisp's body

They were hunting in a wooded area between Oro-Medonte line 4 and 5, spread out in the bush, about a kilometre north of the Oro trail. "I don't know what else to say. It's heartbreaking. It shouldn't have ended this way," he said, his eyes filling with tears.

The hunting group quickly made its way back to one of their houses and contacted OPP.

Brandon ran away from his Barrie home three weeks ago, after his parents took away his Xbox.

Truck driver stays silent on crash

ACCIDENT The 28-year-old London truck driver whose trailer crushed an Oakville man, was almost unable to speak yesterday.

"I don't want to talk about the crash," mumbled a teary-eyed Jeremy Liedtke, after undergoing surgery at St. Joseph's Hospital for a broken jaw.

Liedtke could barely move his head and had difficulty talking, his bruised face covered in cuts, his left foot bandaged.

"Our family is devastated by what happened," said a woman, keeping vigil over Liedtke yesterday. "We feel really badly for the (Taylor) family."

Harry Taylor, an executive with Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre, was killed Wednesday when Liedtke's trailer carrying 25,000 kilograms of copper scrap metal fell from a Hwy. 427 ramp onto Taylor's car, literally cutting it in half, according to police.

What caused the freak accident is yet to be determined, said OPP const. Wayne Weathers.

Council OKs water tax hike, bin fee

INCREASE If you live in Toronto, get ready to pay nine per cent more for water next year, just as you did this year, last year, and the year before.

And just as you likely will every year until 2014.

Toronto councillors passed the hefty increase by a vote of 27 to 13. It will raise a typical household's annual water bill about $47, to $567.

And in a 24-11 vote, council also approved a 2009 solid waste budget that shifts the cost of garbage collection from the property tax bill to a user-fee system.

Councillors who opposed the water price increase complained that the combined effect of the water hike with expected tax increases, a new tax on cars and new fees for garbage disposal will saddle a typical Toronto homeowner with a tax boost equivalent to more than 10 per cent of the average property tax bill in 2009.

Durham officers launch newspaper ads

Saying they're frustrated and stretched to the limit, Durham police officers have launched a public, personal attack against regional chair Roger Anderson and what they call his "reign of error."

In full-page ads running in eight local newspapers this week, the Durham Regional Police Association calls Anderson "unaccountable, untouchable and out of touch" while pointing to his "whopping" salary of $183,868.

"Roger Anderson's reign of error must end NOW!" the ad reads.

The police union's 1,100 members have been working without a contract since January. The police services board has offered a pay increase of 9.4 per cent over three years. But the key issue is that the police service is "sorrowfully understaffed," said union president Doug Cavanaugh.

- Police chief Mike Ewles says he needs 19 more officers in 2009, but has been asked to trim $2 million from the $138-million budget. The union wants 20 hired in each of the next three years.

Charges dropped

Mom relieved ordeal over

A veteran defence lawyer is crediting the work of the Goudge inquiry for a decision yesterday by the Crown to withdraw charges against his client who was charged three years ago with the death of her infant daughter.

Prosecutor Donna Armstrong said the Crown feels it has no reasonable prospect of convicting Anna Sokotnyuk of second-degree murder.

"To lose a three-month-old child and then to be charged with its death in a murder situation is unimaginably horrific."
Robert Nuttall

The 27-year-old woman said she is relieved her ordeal has ended.

The Crown made its decision after an independent review of the case by experts in the wake Justice Stephen Goudge's inquiry probing pediatric forensic pathology in Ontario.

Armstrong said those experts "can't seem to agree" on the cause of Anastasia's death with any "degree of certainty."

"To lose a three-month-old child and then to be charged with its death in a murder situation is unimaginably horrific," Sokotnyuk's lawyer, Robert Nuttall, said outside the courthouse.

Sokotnyuk was charged in 2005, ten months after police received a 9-1-1 call about an infant who had stopped breathing.

Convict faces new child pornography charges

A man convicted of distributing child pornography three years ago is back in custody, but this time his charges include creating illicit images and putting them on the Internet.

A computer was taken from the suspect's home during a raid, police said, adding that the collection of images seized is extensive and contains pictures of "extremely young" victims. "We're very concerned about this collection," Det. Paul Krawczyk said.

Paul Tammeorg, 30, of Augusta Avenue, has been charged with two counts of possession of child pornography, one count of making child pornography available, one count of accessing child pornography, three counts of making child pornography and three counts of failing to comply with probation.

Justin Trudeau holds his son Xavier as he gives a speech during his swearing in ceremony on Parliament Hill yesterday.

Following father's footsteps, Trudeau sworn in as MP

With his year-old son in his arms and mother Margaret looking on, Justin Trudeau followed in his father's footsteps into Parliament yesterday.

"Justin started off as a newborn in these chambers and now he's here," Margaret Kemper, the former wife of Pierre Trudeau, said later.

"Justin has the potential to be a great politician."
Margaret Kemper

Justin Trudeau's swearing-in as an MP, which immediately reignited questions about a future bid for the Liberal leadership, came 43 years after his late father, the former prime minister, was first elected to the House of Commons.

Trudeau, 36, was elected in the Montreal riding of Papineau. "It's a privilege and an honour that I accept with grace, hopefully, and humility, certainly," he said.

Trudeau has dismissed suggestions that he might seek the leader's job. But with his charismatic good looks and high-powered heritage, it's a possibility that keeps popping up whenever the future leadership of the dispirited Liberal party is discussed.

His mother isn't ruling it out. "I am not a psychic," she laughed, speaking with reporters in Parliament.

But, she said, "I think that Justin has the potential to be a great politician. He has very good values... he has big dreams. So, whether he becomes leader or not is entirely in the stars and up to him."

Ottawa sitting on cash

Federal government has $3B unspent funding

The federal government is sitting on $3 billion in unspent infrastructure funding, money that could be used to create thousands of jobs and help immunize Canada's economy against recession, municipal officials say.

Officials with the Federation of Canadian Municipalities went to Parliament Hill yesterday to urge Ottawa to step up infrastructure investments as a way to "soften" the impact of a slowing economy.

"Of all the possible economic tools governments have, infrastructure spending is a tried and true recession fighter," said Sherbrooke Mayor Jean Perrault, president of the municipal federation.

"It creates real jobs fast and it leaves us with much-needed infrastructure," he said.

That appeal got a sympathetic reception from federal Transport Minister John Baird, who says he's keen to get the money — which municipal officials complain has been tied up by red tape — flowing soon.

"I want to see shovels in the ground as quickly as possible," said Baird, who is the government's point man in infrastructure spending. The municipal body is hoping the issue of infrastructure cash is on the agenda for Monday's first ministers' meeting between Prime Minister Stephen Harper, premiers and territorial leaders.

"We need the first ministers to join us in giving the economy a shot in the arm... and help Canadians through the coming recession."
Federal Transport Minister John Baird

"We need the first ministers to join us in giving the economy a shot in the arm that will also rebuild our infrastructure and help Canadians through the coming recession."

To bolster their case, the body cited a report showing that a $3 billion investment in infrastructure — matched by provinces and municipalities — would create almost 100,000 jobs.

"Toronto Mayor David Miller praised the findings, saying it shows direct spending on infrastructure creates twice as many jobs as a tax cut.

"We're not waiting for the federal government. We're moving now," he told reporters yesterday, citing projects planned without Ottawa's contribution. The city has plans to invest $25 billion in infrastructure projects over the next decade.

Water bottle bill poured out

A Liberal private member's bill to ban single-use bottled water was defeated yesterday by political party members of all stripes.

Members voted according to their conscience.

"I wanted to create a dialogue and raise awareness of these issues," said Liberal MPP Dr. Kuldip Kular (Bramalea-Gore-Malton). "I hope in my next term I can bring it back."

The proposed ban was just on single-use plastic water bottles — such as those sold in variety stores or in packs of 24 at the grocers. Kular said it would not affect other types of bottles used to sell water.

A voice vote on the bill aimed at prohibiting the sale of single-use plastic bottles of water seemed like it would pass yesterday afternoon, but after a call for a recorded vote, the bill was defeated.

One of the Liberals who stood up against the bill was Education Minister Kathleen Wynne. After the vote, Wynne said she did so because some schools in Ontario have lead pipes and rely on bottled water.

"I am not opposed to this, I think it is a good idea. It is just the timing," she said.

Environment Minister John Gerretsen told reporters earlier in the day he would like Ontario to become a "zero waste" society but he also doesn't want a one-off approach to something like this.

Elizabeth Griswold of the Canadian Bottled Water Association said Kular's bill is really about packaging. "There are thousands of other products using the same container," she said.

Charest's claim of money in the bank challenged

ELECTION One day down and already Quebec Premier Jean Charest's call to Quebecers to give him a majority based on his sound management of the economy has been dented.

What Quebec's two opposition leaders question is Charest's claim to having have a $2.3 billion reserve, which has allowed the government to forecast a zero deficit for this fiscal year and the next.

The report is typically released each fall, but when Charest called a provincial election on Tuesday, the release was shelved.

Longtime legion member Al Hebburn, 92, of Toronto, who survived the Battle of Dieppe and the invasion of Normandy as an infantryman, stands outside Branch 31.

Legion losing members as old war vets pass on

For Al Hebburn, the Royal Canadian Legion has long been a vital part of his life, as it has been for tens of thousands of others who have served the country in war.

But Hebburn, 92, and many other legion members wonder how long the venerable institution that bills itself as one of Canada's largest service organizations can outlast a dying breed of veterans and retain the importance it holds for him.

"If we didn't have such an organization, I'd be lost in this world," says Hebburn, who as an infantry sergeant survived the bloody Battle of Dieppe and the invasion of Normandy in the Second World War.

"If we didn't have such an organization, I'd be lost in this world."
Veteran Al Hebburn

"Most of my buddies are gone. My family is all gone."

Like many of the 500,000 men and women who returned to Canada after helping defeat the Nazis, Hebburn signed onto his local legion in Toronto and became active.

"It's a socializing affair," Hebburn says. "It's a keep in touch with the people that I already enjoy, which is ex-soldiers and sailors and so forth."

Now he's just one of four Second World War vets who still go to the Branch 31 hall in west-end Toronto, down from 60 a decade ago. THE CANADIAN PRESS

New minister says he won't reverse arts cuts

PROGRAMS Those who hoped to persuade Canada's new heritage minister to reverse the government's proposed cuts to arts and culture programs will be disappointed.

Heritage Minister James Moore says he has no plans to cancel the $45 million in cutbacks announced before the start of the federal election campaign.

"These decisions have already been made, they're in the past, they're in the past."
James Moore

"These decisions have already been made, they're in the past," Moore told The Canadian Press in an interview at his office in Gatineau, Que.

"But in the future, there will certainly be opportunities to examine our spending."

The 32-year-old minister said he's ready to meet with cultural organizations, including the artists' union, to "build bridges" and discuss the necessary investments that will benefit the arts community.

One of the main goals is to re-establish dialogue with the arts community and with voters, particularly in Quebec, where the cuts stirred several angry protests.

Some opponents speaker at a rally in August compared him to Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler.

"I can assure these groups that I am certainly ready to work with them," said Moore. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Obama needs our oil, says Stelmach

ENERGY Premier Ed Stelmach has a message for United States president-elect Barack Obama: You need Alberta's oilsands to provide cheap energy to help the sagging American economy.

Stelmach has been trying for months to convince U.S. policy makers that the production of oil and gasoline from tar-like bitumen in Alberta is no more harmful to the environment than other conventional sources of energy.

Obama and his advisers are among those who have condemned the U.S. reliance on "dirty" oil sources including Alberta's oilsands.

But Stelmach is hoping that the president-elect will have a change of heart. THE CANADIAN PRESS

'No-Drama Obama' no more?

Selections for top posts suggest new, aggressive tone

Barack Obama is signalling a shift in tactics and temperament as he moves from candidate to president-elect, picking sharp-elbowed Washington insiders for top posts.

His choice yesterday for White House chief of staff, Rahm Emanuel, a fiery partisan who doesn't mind breaking glass and hurting feelings, is a significant departure from the soft-spoken, low-key aides that "No-Drama Obama" has surrounded himself with during his campaign.

And transition chief John Podesta, like Emanuel, is a former top aide to Bill Clinton and a tough partisan infighter, though less bombastic than the new chief of staff.

The selections are telling for Obama, who campaigned as a nontraditional, almost "post-partisan" newcomer. People close to him say the selections show that Obama is aware of his weaknesses as well as his strengths and knows what he needs to be successful as he shifts from campaigning to governing.

"No one I know is better at getting things done than Rahm Emanuel," Obama said in a statement announcing the selection.

Obama, who survived a long contest with Senator Hillary Rodham Clinton for the Democratic presidential nomination, also has made it clear he will rely heavily on veterans of her husband's eight-year administration, the only Democratic presidency in the past 28 years.

Podesta was Bill Clinton's chief of staff, and several other former Clinton aides are on Obama's short lists for key jobs, Democratic officials say. Some of them helped write a large briefing book on how to govern, assembled under Podesta's supervision.

News in brief

SENATE Another Democrat is on the way to the U.S. Senate, raising the party's total after Tuesday's election to at least 55. The latest Democrat to score a victory is Oregon's Jeff Merkley, who defeated Republican incumbent Gordon Smith. Three Senate races are yet to be decided: Alaska, Minnesota and Georgia. As it stands now, the breakdown in the Senate also includes two independents, who caucus with the Democrats, and 40 Republicans.

BERLUSCONI Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi has a history of making impolitic remarks. Iran's president congratulates Obama on win

POLITICS President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad has congratulated Barack Obama on his election win.

It's believed to be the first time an Iranian leader has offered such wishes to a U.S. president-elect since the 1979 Islamic Revolution.

Ahmadinejad sent a message to Obama in which he congratulated the Democrat on "attracting the majority of voters in the election."

He also says he hopes Obama will "use the opportunity to serve the (American) people and leave a good name" during his term in office.

The note was carried by the official IRNA news agency yesterday.

Knives come out for Sarah Palin after defeat

BLAME Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin wasn't aware that Africa was a continent, and she and her brood behaved like a band of "Wasilla hillbillies looting Neiman Marcus from coast to coast," anonymous aides to Republican John McCain are telling prominent news organizations.

Less than 24 hours after McCain lost the presidential election to Democrat Barack Obama, those close to him apparently wasted no time burning up the phone lines to dish the dirt on Palin, who was chosen as his running mate in late August.

"I think it was a difficult relationship (between John McCain and Palin)."
Top McCain official

Ongoing tension between Palin and McCain reportedly led to the deterioration of their relationship, to the point that they were seldom talking.

"I think it was a difficult relationship," one top McCain campaign official told the New York Times. "McCain talked to her occasionally." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Obama wins North Carolina

ELECTION Barack Obama has won yet another state in the presidential election.

The Associated Press has declared Obama the winner in North Carolina.

Obama already had more than enough electoral votes to clinch the presidency.

But yesterday's victory in North Carolina was a symbolic triumph that underscored his political strength as he turned nine red states blue in 2008.

Obama was declared the winner after canvassing counties in North Carolina to determine the number of outstanding provisional ballots.

That survey found that there are not enough remaining ballots for John McCain to close a 13,693-vote deficit.

Afghan death toll keeps rising

The civilian death roll continues to rise in Afghanistan, with a report yesterday that coalition bombs killed another seven civilians following a clash between U.S. forces and the Taliban.

It was the second time this week that an errant air strike has cost the lives of what the military calls "non-combatants."

It occurred just hours after President Hamid Karzai urged president-elect Barack Obama to ensure that Afghan civilians are not killed in operations by U.S. forces.

Monday night, nearly 40 women and children died when coalition bombs hit a wedding party in the Kandahar province.

The latest incident, on Wednesday night, was in the Ghormach district of Badghis province in the northwest, where a three-hour clash between insurgents and Afghan and U.S. troops preceded an air strike that hit the house of a provincial council member, possibly resulting in an unknown number of deaths. My father was 34 when he enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force, a week before Christmas in 1940. It's hard to remember now that, halfway through the second year of World War Two, winning didn't look like a sure thing for the Allies — at this point just Britain and the Commonwealth countries. It would be six months before Germany invaded Russia, and another year before Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, and no one expected Britain to hold out until then.

From where we sit, history always looks inevitable; a single outcome never less than ordained, all the drama and anxiety long since evaporated. World War Two was supposed to be over in a few months but dragged on for over four years, but by the time my father enlisted there were credible scenarios imagining the war with Germany and Italy lasting a decade, perhaps longer.

John Babcock is the only surviving Canadian veteran of World War One, and in two or three decades the men who served alongside my father will be down to a few dozen, perhaps less. The cenotaphs and war memorials around which our Remembrance Day services are held will have been in place for at least a century, and almost no one will be left alive who will remember how crucial they once were — the closest thing to a headstone here for the friends and family of the men and women who were buried all over Europe and Asia.

"They are sending some men over to England from here in the next couple of weeks but I don't expect I'll be going," my father wrote to my mother from his air base outside Ottawa in 1944, just two months after D-Day.

"It's only for six months but they have to pass a medical so that lets me out."

A mechanic, he lost an eye in Dartmouth, N.S., working on a plane less than a year after enlisting, but refused a medical discharge; he would remain in uniform until two months after Japan surrendered, and he would never leave Canada.

Probably because he never thought he'd really risked his life, my father never joined the Legion or marched in a Remembrance Day parade. My brother remembers his medals showing up in the mail on a Saturday, almost a decade after the war had ended.

For every veteran in their beret in front of the cenotaphs next Tuesday there will be a few men like my father. As the years pass there will be fewer of both, and ever smaller contingents of men and women who served in Korea, on peacekeeping and UN missions in the Sinai, Somalia, Bosnia or Rwanda, or in Afghanistan.

Remembering will be hard work, but it has to be done, if only as a tribute to the men and women for whom history was anxious and unwritten, motivated by duty, and expecting little more than soldier's pay and the hope that, at least one day a year, the rest of us will commit to the difficult but necessary task of remembering when history was alive.

Keep the blood donations flowing

By DR. BRIAN BERRY

Blood is at the heart of the health care system. Used to treat trauma victims, people battling cancer, and surgical patients, blood and blood products stabilize, improve and save the lives of hundreds of thousands of Canadians every year.

But, like many other precious resources in our world, blood is in limited supply and it continues to dwindle. It is a simple case of supply and demand.

A dramatic drop in Canada's blood inventory in the past eight weeks has elevated an ongoing issue to critical action for all Canadians. Canadian Blood Services normally holds four to six days' worth of all blood types — an international standard for a secure blood system. Last week, that number dropped to just more than two days' worth for some of the most critical blood types.

Dr. Brian Berry

What does that mean for doctors and patients? Currently, no surgeries or treatments have been postponed or cancelled. Our hospitals are continually watching their blood supplies and ensuring blood products are used without waste.

The needs of critical care patients will always be met. However, if the situation does not reverse itself, the needs of less critical patients — those undergoing non-emergent surgeries and ongoing treatments — may have to be delayed. We are preparing for this possibility now as every drop of blood counts toward making a difference in the life of someone who desperately needs it.

One cancer patient can require up to eight individuals' blood donation per week for treatment. A patient undergoing heart bypass surgery could need six people to give blood for that one surgery. A trauma, like a serious car accident could use up to 50 people's blood donations.

Blood is very much at the heart of the health care system. But it's the blood donors who make that heart pump. Without the generosity, selflessness, and caring of voluntary donors, our heart would stop beating.

And while no Canadian will ever go without the blood that they need — thanks to the 400,000 active blood donors who donate at Canadian Blood Services' blood donor clinics across the country — the widening gap of supply versus demand can threaten patient care across Canada.

"Blood is very much at the heart of the health care system. But it's the blood donors who make that heart pump. Without the generosity, selflessness, and caring of voluntary donors, our heart would stop beating."

Please become a blood donor and please continue to donate. The heart of Canada's health care system depends on you now more than ever. Call 1-888-2-DONATE to book an appointment to give blood.

Dr. Brian Berry is chair of B.C. Transfusion Medicine Advisory Group and director of hematopathology for Vancouver Island Health Authority.

Alexander Bam, TORONTO

From a Canadian perspective it's not good at all that Barack Obama was elected.

Obama has stated that he would like to "renegotiate" NAFTA. Now, with him in power, he will have an easier time to pass his laws, some of which will be to modify NAFTA in favour of the U.S. So imagine what the softwood lumber dispute did to the Canadian lumber industry, and now imagine the same scenario being repeated with many other Canadian industries.

Obama is also an anti-war candidate. Even though he has said "we need to commit more troops to Afghanistan," he also said that the "surge" strategy that has worked so well in Iraq will fail in Afghanistan because of the different dynamic there. If Obama reduces American involvement in Afghanistan, Canadians would lose the support and the might of U.S. military there. This will put our troops in Afghanistan in greater danger.

Correction

In Wednesday's edition, columnist Paul Sullivan suggested that Alberta's solicitor general should see what it feels like to be Tasered himself. In fact, Solicitor General Fred Lindsay and RCMP Commissioner William Elliot were voluntarily Tasered by police on May 1st of this year. Metro regrets the error.

More aid for banks: PM

The federal government is planning to provide more help to Canadian banks because they continue to cope with unfavourable credit conditions, Prime Minister Stephen Harper said yesterday.

Speaking prior to a private meeting with key executives from the banking and insurance industries, he stressed that any additional intervention would not expose taxpayers to any significant cost or risk.

The federal government has already agreed to buy as much as $25 billion in residential mortgages from Canadian banks so that they can keep lending to consumers. So far, it has purchased about $12 billion worth of those loans. Ottawa also agreed last month to provide guarantees on more than $200 billion of bank debt.

Personal bankruptcies up in September
There were 8,836 bankruptcies in Canada in September, almost 1,400 more than in August and almost 2,000 more than in September 2007 — that's an 18.7 per cent rise from August and 28.4 per cent increase from a year ago. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Retailer tightens credit card limits

Concerned about bankruptcies and credit risk, Canadian Tire said it is lowering limits on some customers' credit cards, another sign of clamp-down on consumers as the financial crisis persists.

The retailer, which reported a 6.3 per cent rise in third-quarter earnings, is tightening credit availability for inactive cardholders, since some might be tempted to rack up purchases on their Canadian Tire cards after maxing out their other cards and credit, chief financial officer Huw Thomas said. Some U.S. firms have similarly reduced spending limits on cards.

TORONTO MAPLE LEAFS vs BOSTON BRUINS

THE SKINNY: Blake Wheeler had his first three-goal game in the NHL, hours after changing his uniform number, to help the Bruins beat the Leafs 5-2.

THE HAT TRICK: Wheeler completed his hat trick with 53 seconds left on a shot from the blue line into an empty net after the Maple Leafs pulled Vesa Toskala. The fans then littered the ice with hats.

IN THE NUMBERS: Wheeler, a rookie from the University of Minnesota, changed from No. 42 to 26 before the game.

Boston's Shawn Thornton is upended as he collides with the Leafs' Jeff Finger last night.

ANOTHER LEAF COMEBACK? Not really. Alexander Steen cut the score to 3-1 midway into the third, but the Bruins killed off a 5-on-3 power play late before Shawn Thronton put it away.

GRABOVSKI GRABS ANOTHER: Mikhail Grabovski picked up another goal, and now has tallies in three straight games.

THE NEXT GAME: Home against the Habs on Saturday.

KEY MATCHUP:
Anthony Parker and Jamario Moon vs. Joe Johnson and Josh Smith
In the wake of Wednesday's loss to the Pistons, wherein Parker and Moon were outscored 49-14 by Detroit wing combo of Richard Hamilton and Tayshaun Prince, the Toronto swingmen could use an evening of redemption. But Johnson and Smith, who averaged a combined 43 points a game in three meetings with the Raptors last season to Parker and Moon's 22.7, offer little respite.

OF NOTE: The Raptors spent time before yesterday's flight to Atlanta examining video of their 100-93 loss to Detroit on Wednesday. The Hawks, at 3-0 one of just four remaining unbeaten NBA teams, are coming off an 87-79 win over the Hornets in New Orleans. It was the latter squad's first loss of the year. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Habs coming out of week-long layoff

A six-day break this early in the NHL season had Montreal Canadiens defenceman Mike Komisarek feeling antsy.

"The guys enjoy coming to the rink and being around each other, but at a certain point, a guy like me just wants to lay into someone other than my teammates," the six-foot-four rearguard said Thursday. "That competitive blood starts flowing and you just want to compete and play.

"It gets pretty boring, but we have plenty of games coming up."

The Canadiens have not played since their 5-4 win on a four-goal third-period comeback on Saturday against the Islanders in New York, but after a day off, a day of work in the gym and three days of practice, the schedule will get busy again. They play Friday night in Columbus with backup Jaroslav Halak in goal and on Saturday night in Toronto with Carey Price in the net.

THE CANADIAN PRESS/RYAN REMIORZ
Carey Price celebrates with Josh Gorges after Montreal's 3-2 win over Carolina last Tuesday.

Every team likes a break, but not after only 10 games. Especially when they are as hot as the Canadiens, who opened the season on an 8-1-1 tear.

"I know the rest is always good," said coach Guy Carbonneau. "It gave us time to make sure that everyone's healthy, but you're always afraid that you're going to lose your touch and timing around the net, especially when things are going well." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Home field not a given in CFL

CFL PLAYOFFS

East Semifinal

Tomorrow, 1 p.m.
TV: TSN

Winnipeg's Milt Stegall guaranteed a win over Edmonton if the game sells out.

Question marks

• Will the Bombers manage to sell out Canad Inns Stadium? If they do, outspoken veteran receiver Milt Stegall says the home team will reward the fans. "Now I'm not a marketing major, I'm not a numbers guy," he says. "But we've got to sell out this game. This is what we're looking for. These fans come out, we're guaranteeing a win."

• Fine, but can they stop the Edmonton aerial attack led by QB Ricky Ray? Ray led the CFL in total passing — 5,661 yards, and as he goes, so goes the Esks offence.

Exclamation points

• Winnipeg QB Kevin Glenn has a deep corps of receivers and a one-two punch at running back in Joe Smith and Fred Reid, but he matched his 20 touchdowns thrown with 20 interceptions tossed.

• Bombers kicker Alexis Serna was good on only 66.7 percent of his field goal attempts.

• Edmonton was only 1-2 in its last three games, both losses blowouts; Winnipeg won six of its last eight after starting the season 2-8. Bombers are 5-4 at home; Eskimos 3-6 on the road.

West Semifinal

Tomorrow, 4:30 p.m.
TV: TSN

Question marks

•Having beaten the Roughriders in two out of three meetings this season, can the Lions do it again in front of a rabid Regina gathering? (That last game featured the Lions being pelted by beer cans and debris.)

• Will QB Buck Pierce's sore ankle impede his play and, if it does, is Jarious Jackson ready to step into the breach?

• Which Michael Bishop will show up at QB for the Riders: The one who lost the starter's job a few weeks ago, or the one who has played well of late, leading Saskatchewan to three wins in a row?

Exclamation points

•Riders' Matt Dominguez will not play; Lions' Jason Clermont should.

• B.C. had 13 players named to the West Division all-star team, seven more than first-place Calgary. Saskatchewan is 7-2 at home; B.C. is 5-4 on the road. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Ferguson

SOCCER Manchester United manager Sir Alex Ferguson faces a touchline ban after being charged yesterday by the English Football Association over his "improper conduct" toward a referee. Ferguson jabbed his finger at Mike Dean over the referee's decisions during Saturday's 4-3 victory over Hull. Ferguson has until Nov. 19 to respond to the charge.

TENNIS Venus Williams defeated her sister 5-7, 6-1, 6-0 yesterday to reach the semifinals of the WTA Tour's season-ending Sony Ericsson Championships in Qatar. The American sisters are now 9-9 in career matchups. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hamilton says racism in F1 no joke

Lewis Hamilton rejected F1 boss Bernie Ecclestone's assertion yesterday that racist abuse directed at the driver probably started as a joke.

Formula One's first black champion was the target of racist abuse on a Spanish website and endured other insults in the buildup to last Sunday's Brazilian Grand Prix. "(It was) probably beginning as a joke rather than anything abusive," Ecclestone said yesterday in a radio interview, pointing to poor sportsmanship rather than racism by Spanish and Brazilian fans.

Hamilton disagreed and said he "didn't see it as a joke."

"It's something that happened, but it is in the past, you've got to look forward," said the McLaren driver. Hamilton clinched the F1 title by a single point over Felipe Massa of Brazil at the Interlagos circuit. In the week leading up to the Brazilian race, Hamilton was the target of racist abuse on a Spanish website, was insulted by two Brazilian comedians and was handed a black cat — a symbol of bad luck in Brazil — at a sponsor's function. Bradley on his way to the Blue Jays?

YorkReport

Marty York

marty.york@metronews.ca

He has a personal policy of never smiling during games. He once was suspended for spitting gum at an umpire.

He has, without explaining his reasons, gone for weeks at a time without speaking to his teammates. He is, in no uncertain terms, a brat.

But Milton Bradley is a brat with a bat, a pretty productive bat, and there's a good chance it'll be in the heart of the Blue Jays' order next season.

Sources tell Metro that Canada's MLB franchise has decided to diligently pursue Bradley as a free agent.

"We need offensive help," a front-office source with the Jays confirmed, "and Bradley won't be nearly as expensive as Manny Ramirez or Mark Texeira (other big-name batters on the free-agent market). Obviously, we know Bradley's reputation. We know what he's like. He plays angry, for whatever reason. But we think the pros outweigh the cons with him. Just look at his stats."

Bradley hit a career-high .327 last season.

Bradley, 30, has been with five major-league teams since starting his big-league career with the Montreal Expos in 2000.

He has a .280 career average and 103 home runs in 2,832 at-bats. Last year, with the Texas Rangers, he hit a career-high .327, with 22 homers.

The Jays will have at least one significant challenger for Bradley's services.

The AL champion Tampa Bay Rays also are making plans to go after him.

• Overheard at the Raptors' game in Toronto Wednesday night:

Members of the Detroit Pistons kibitzing with Raptors star Chris Bosh and suggesting that their club likely will dangle megabucks in front of him when he becomes a free agent in the summer of 2010.

The Pistons certainly will have the salary-cap room, and the Flint Journal's web site even had a story yesterday suggesting Detroit's acquisition of Bosh was a strong possibility.

The story, incidentally, produced some negative web postings from Detroit fans, including these two:

– "Not saying Bosh is not a good player, but watching him (Wednesday) night, and I know he scored 20+, but he really looks SLOW!"

– "Forget Bosh. He's too soft."

• Quick questions:

– Doesn't new Raptors' play-by-play guy Matt Devlin sound a lot like TSN's Rod Black?

– Is there any question any more that Eli Manning has become a better quarterback than Peyton Manning?

– Has Bill Belichick lost it?

– Is the CFL really fooling you when it insists that tomorrow's Winnipeg-Edmonton game is an Eastern playoff?

Craig's Bond list

Actor reshaping 007 for a new generation — and closer to Fleming's original character

RICK MCGINNIS
rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

Movie feature

Onscreen, Daniel Craig's James Bond is laconic, a coiled spring of potentially lethal energy with an almost lizard-like appraising gaze that's closer to writer Ian Fleming's idea of his hero than any actor who's every played the role.

In person, he's chatty and anxious, frequently apologizing for coming up with answers on the fly, and unwilling to offer himself as any kind of authority on Bond outside of his own incarnation of the role.

After the successful relaunch of the series with Casino Royale, we catch up with Craig's Bond at the start of the new film, Quantum Of Solace, mere minutes after the last film ended. Craig admits that he hasn't any idea of where, or when, he'll be taking Bond in any further film, but that a sequel to Casino Royale felt inevitable.

"The idea of doing a sequel only happened when we seemed to have unfinished business," Craig recalls. "He'd fallen in love and had his heart broken and been betrayed, which was the big message we were trying to put across in Casino Royale.

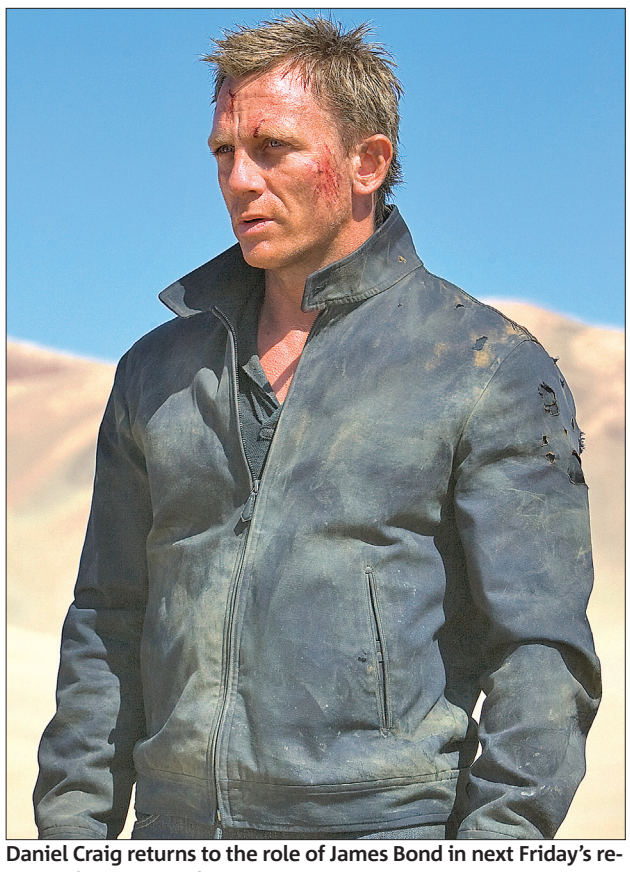
"Being betrayed had thrown him — this is a man who never loses at cards, never loses at love, never loses at anything."

Craig's Bond is often described as a more elemental Bond than any of his predecessors, free of the self-satire of Roger Moore or Pierce Brosnan's over-refined 007, and even more brutal than Sean Connery's original. He reluctantly agrees, but insists that it has to be taken in context.

"I know they're saying he's much tougher and has a much harder edge, but I haven't done anything to modernize the character. If anything, I've tried to cling to the past," he said.

"I want him to remain misogynistic, because I love the debate between him and (Judi Dench's) M there. Because M is the balance; he's the one that's behaving badly as a man and she's the one slapping him down, and I like that balance.

"And I also like that being put against stronger women characters is a much more interesting dynamic. That there is something archaic about him. He's a soldier, and there is something that being trained as a soldier instills in a human being, and it's not being nice."



Daniel Craig returns to the role of James Bond in next Friday's release of Quantum of Solace.

Communist group calls newest Bond girl a traitor

CONTROVERSY The Communist party in St. Petersburg says Olga Kurylenko, the Ukrainian-born model who plays a Bolivian agent in the latest Bond film, Quantum of Solace, has betrayed her roots.

"In the name of all communists we appeal to you, prodigal daughter of poor Ukraine and deserter of Slavic world," the party said in an open letter dated Oct. 21 and posted on their website last Friday.

The Soviet Union "gave you free education, free medical care but nobody knew you would commit an act of intellectual and moral betrayal that you would become a movie kept girl of Bond, who in his movies kills hundreds of Soviet people and citizens of other socialist countries: Cubans, Vietnamese, North Koreans, Chinese and Nicaraguans," the party said.

Sergei Malenkovich, head of the party's regional organization, told The Associated Press that latest Bond movie is "an insult for Russians."

"In this movie they wanted to show that a Ukrainian girl sleeps with an American. It's a part of information and psychological war," he said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Plenty of jokes — too many tales — in Madagascar sequel

Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa

Director: Eric Darnell, Tom McGrath
Stars: Ben Stiller, Chris Rock
Classification: G
Rating: ●●½

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

REVIEW If it ain't broke, don't fix it. Yes, it's an archaic, overused adage, but when it comes to Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa, it also applies.

After all, since the original raked in over $530 million dollars worldwide in 2005, there was certainly no doubt we would see a sequel. But who knew it would be more bloated than its predecessor's box-office take?

Set shortly after the first movie's conclusion, Alex the lion (Ben Stiller), Marty the zebra (Chris Rock) and the rest of the Manhattan-raised crew of animals are marooned in Madagascar.

After barely fixing a battered plane to return home, the group crash-lands in an African wildlife reserve. There, each of the main characters set out on their own brief journey of discovery — most notably Alex, who reunites with his feline folks (voiced by Sherri Shepherd and the late Bernie Mac).

Alex the lion (voiced by Ben Stiller) returns in the new Madagascar film.

Now, Madagascar 2 isn't without its improvements: It has plenty of jokes and inside-gags for the adults but they're mostly just recycled sensibilities from the 2005 film. Plus, after 3 years of technological advancements, the quality of animation is ever-increasingly remarkable — especially broad scenes of the African grasslands.

But of course, the story is what really counts and Madagascar 2 tells too many tales.

The movie also gives a lot more screen time to manic lemur King Julien (Sacha Baron Cohen) and those cunning penguins but even the novelty of those characters has worn somewhat stale three years yonder.

Besides, with no less than 13 central characters to flush out this time around, Madagascar 2 has enough to accomplish in 89 minutes without piling on more plot points about crafty critters.

Also in theatres

• Also opening this week is the comedy Soul Men. There are no pre-screenings of the movie, but visit metronews.ca/movies on Sunday — and read Monday's edition of Metro — for a full review.

Role Models packs laughs

Role Models
Director: David Wain
Stars: Paul Rudd, Seann William Scott
Classification: 14A
Rating:

RICK MCGINNIS

Without its leading men — using the term loosely in this case — Role Models would be just another instalment in the sub-Apatow genre, which is to say a comedy based on character and dialogue and the odd kick in the nuts.

Paul Rudd and Seann William Scott play best friends edging into their 30s who've reacted to the creeping milestone by either lapsing into growing despair (Rudd's Danny) or clinging to a value system forged during a particularly successful spring break (Scott's Wheeler).

They get jolted out of their ruts when they're given a choice between jail and community service in a Big Brother-type mentoring program, after totalling their company truck during an outburst brought on by a breakup and too many energy drinks.

Both actors have reliable personas that do most of the heavy lifting for them; Rudd brings to mind the first serious boyfriend most women have — the one who hated all her friends and quietly resented that she made more money.

No matter what Scott accomplishes in his career, he'll probably always be known for playing Stifler in the American Pie movies, a character of iconic importance for a generation that has grown from student to first-time homeowner since he first embodied the role, which for this anxious cohort has a status that earlier generations once reserved for Rhett Butler or Rick from Casablanca.

The head of the program takes a wise dislike to Danny and Wheeler, and sticks them with the dregs of her client list — a gratingly gawky nerd obsessed with fantasy role play (Christopher Mintz-Plasse who played McLovin in Superbad), and an aggressively charmless little boy with a vocabulary shaped by gangster rap and Def Comedy Jam (Bobb'e J. Thompson).

At first, jail looks like a preferable option, but the two men inevitably discover something resembling a paternal instinct, but not before getting off a string of gags that got the film an R rating in the United States.

Rudd and Scott are simply the best parts of a great cast that delivers a barrage of laughs, the highlight of which is probably the most perfect explanation of KISS ever committed to film.

The ending is inevitably uplifting and sweet, though it's easily overlooked as a mere formality at the end of a comedy that relentlessly capitalizes on the brute fact that most people are annoying jerks.

Real Time is no nail-biter

Real Time
Director: Randall Cole
Stars: Jay Baruchel, Randy Quaid
Classification: 14A
Rating:

STEVE GOW

Jay Baruchel, left, and Randy Quaid star in Real Time.

Having recently starred in two other intimate Canuck flicks — Just Buried and Fetching Cody — Judd Apatow regular Jay Baruchel (Knocked Up) yet again returns from Tinseltown to play a young gambler hijacked by Reuben (Randy Quaid), a hitman ordered to kill the unlucky debtor in Real Time.

With an hour to live, Andy is given the opportunity to spend it any way he wants by his would-be killer. Unable to decide, the pair waste it driving from a hooker's alley to a fast-food joint before stopping by grandma's bungalow to say hello. All the while, Reuben waxes poetic about taking advantage of life.

Written and directed by Randall Cole (19 Months), Real Time does have some fun dialogue and moments of inspired acting, although Quaid's mysterious accent was less than convincing; it seems to change.

Further, since most of the story unfolds between two unflattering dudes driving around Hamilton — well, it's not exacting nail-biting drama. In fact, what truly motivates the generous hitman remains unresolved; although a thoughtful twist at the end helps redeem the film's slow boil.

While Baruchel puts in a respectable showing, it's not clear whether he's built up a big enough fan base yet to carry this movie. One thing is certain: the Randy Quaid Fan Club certainly won't be filling the seats on this one.

Van Damme mocks himself in new film

Director asked the Muscles from Brussels to take punches at his own celebrity status

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

Movie feature

They say everyone gets their 15 minutes of fame. Jean-Claude Van Damme surely had his share but that seemingly dried up right around the time he played an ass-kicking fashion designer opposite master thespian Rob Schneider in Knock Off a decade ago.

Or did it?

Apparently, the Muscles from Brussels is back and garnering acclaim not just for his mastery of martial arts. In the new film JCVD — hitting theatres next Friday — Van Damme is actually showing some impressive acting chops by playing … himself.

"I loved (Van Damme) when I was 15 and I hated his films when I was 17 because I was on to something else," admitted French director Mabrouk El Mechri in a recent interview. "But he always remained in my mind."

It's true. Van Damme never really went away. While he's continued to work on obscure action flicks, his name has become a punchline synonymous with washed-up action heroes. So how do you pitch a has-been a story that ostensibly mocks his career?

"He laughed exactly where I wanted him to laugh so it was a good thing," said El Mechri about Van Damme's initial reaction to the script.

"He's a person really aware and conscious about the way he's being perceived by people so you don't fool him."

Jean-Claude Van Damme plays himself in the movie JCVD, which hits theatres next Friday.

In JCVD, Van Damme does take a brave, self-effacing look at himself. Caught in the middle of a bank robbery-gone-wrong, Van Damme becomes a hostage while the media world explodes, falsely assuming that he's the perpetrator.

"He told me pretty weird stories about the way people handle his career, like he was on probation or did something wrong," says El-Mechri about the film's approach. "We're talking about the way people around him use (his celebrity) as a weapon to take something from him."

Fictionalizing such events as Van Damme's real life child custody battle, JCVD does more than create a hilarious inside-look at the fleeting celebrity of Jean-Claude Van Damme. It succeeds at shedding light on the ugly side of being famous.

As El Mechri points out, "It's a pretty tricky thing, celebrity, because everybody wants a piece of you."

Quote of the week

"Reading the script, I knew that one of the major functions is to be the supporting boyfriend, what in a straight movie would be the supporting wife role … "For a female actress, maybe that would sound like, 'Oh, no, another supporting wife role.' But I've never been offered that part."

Synecdoche gets lost

Philip Seymour Hoffman plays a man whose life is falling apart in Charlie Kaufman's Synecdoche, New York.

Synecdoche, New York
Director: Charlie Kaufman

Classification: 14A
Rating: ●●½

KEVIN COURRIER
for Metro Canada

In Synecdoche, New York, screenwriter Charlie Kaufman (Being John Malkovich, Adaptation, Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind), whose specialty is abstract absurdism, makes his directing debut trying to blur the line between art and life.

He blurs more than he clarifies, but the picture is still a fascinating failure.

Playwright Caden Cotard (Philip Seymour Hoffman) works for a regional theatre company in Schenectady, N.Y.

Meanwhile, his marriage to Adele (Catherine Keener) is falling apart — simultaneous to his production of Arthur Miller's Death of a Salesman.

In response to the heated crisis on the home front, Cotard mounts an epic theatrical construct — a synecdoche of his life — where every character and place he conceives symbolizes his entire being.

For about the first half-hour, Kaufman is able to comically capture the psychological crackup of those obsessed artists who fear that if their art isn't going smoothly, then their life must also be heading for the gutter.

But when Caden attempts to resolve his neurosis through this burgeoning dramatic construct — where city blocks seem to contain every facet of his life — Kaufman's idea quickly runs out of steam.

Initially the performers, Hoffman, Keener, Sadie Goldstein (as their precocious daughter, Olive), and Samantha Morton (as one of his lovers) help anchor the story by illuminating how life's follies can't be so easily controlled, or resolved.

But Kaufman becomes self-congratulatory about his conceit and ultimately we get lost in the narrative labyrinth.

Synecdoche, New York inevitably swallows its own tail.

Scott Thomas delivers her best work in new film

I've Loved You So Long

Director: Philippe Claudel
Stars: Kristin Scott Thomas
Classification: 14A
Rating:

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

REVIEW I've Loved You So Long is an emotionally challenging — if somewhat unfulfilling — film elevated by an amazing central performance.

Kristin Scott Thomas stars as a woman permanently marked by a single terrible act and struggling to reestablish herself in the world. It's a movie filled with complicated emotions and difficult moral questions, told with great patience and care.

Unfortunately, the story hinges on a central mystery that, while wonderfully developed, reaches a somewhat implausible conclusion that almost derails the entire film.

The movie opens with Juliette Fontaine (Scott Thomas) being picked up from prison by her sister, Lea, whom she hasn't seen in 15 years. We soon learn that Juliette was imprisoned for mysteriously killing her son. From there, Lea helps her sister rebuild her life and tries to discover the motivation behind the murder. Sadly, when we finally learn the truth, the reveal feels contrived and diminishes the overall impact of the movie.

The performances from the entire cast are so strong that they almost make the forced conclusion believable. In particular, Scott Thomas delivers a stunning lead performance that completely captures the complicated emotional state of a character who barely speaks and refuses to share herself with anyone. It is an extraordinary piece of acting and probably Scott Thomas' best work.

Adding star power one voice at a time

InFocus

Richard Crouse

mrchaos33@hotmail.com

Would you spend money to see an animated movie starring Nicole Jaffe and Henry Corden? Probably not, because you've never heard of either of them.

Oh, but you've heard them.

Jaffe voiced Velma on Scooby Doo, while Corden vocalized for Fred Flintstone. Their voices are familiar, but not well-known enough for the producers of big budget cartoons like Madagascar: Escape 2 Africa, opening in theatres this weekend.

"If they were doing a half-hour Flintstone show today, they'd still go with me," said Corden in 1999, "but for a motion picture, even an animated one, they'd go with a celebrity to play Fred, because they need to sell the picture."

Big-name actors who made their bones in live action have become the norm in modern animation.

Madagascar redux features everyone from Ben Stiller to Jada Pinkett Smith. Somewhere Nicole Jaffe is standing in a bank line waiting to cash her unemployment cheque.

In the old days, Disney frequently used celebrity voices to augment their cartoons — remember Sebastian Cabot in The Jungle Book? — but the trend kicked into overdrive when Robin Williams's hyperkinetic jabbering stole the show in Aladdin.

It was a tour de force performance and Williams's star power helped push the box office past $200,000,000, an animated film first.

Marquee actors like voice work for the same reason I like doing my radio show — the hours are good and you don't have to shave.

Marlon Brando was so taken with the easy money of voice acting he suggested doing the role of Superman's Jor-El in voice-over, with his on-screen character portrayed as a glowing, levitating green bagel. That one didn't pan out but he took further audio-only roles, including his final gig performing an old lady voice in the unreleased Big Bug Man.

David Schwimmer voices Melman the Giraffe in the Madagascar sequel.

Other star turns haven't been so ignoble. Jeremy Irons was positively Shakespearean as The Lion King's Scar and Orson Welles thrilled a generation of tweens as the voice of planet-gobbler Unicron in Transformers: The Movie.

But too often the big names offer little other than recognizable voices, and that can work against the part they're playing.

Can you hear James Earl Jones as Mufasa without thinking of Darth Vader? Me neither.

It boils down to bucks — David Schwimmer's Melman the Giraffe will put more bums in seats than Henry Corden. It's not about talent, it's about money. "I hate it but I understand it," Corden said.

A dilemma worth your time

Triage: Dr. James Orbinski's Humanitarian Dilemma

Director: Patrick Reed
Classification: STC
Rating:

KEVIN COURRIER
for Metro Canada

Director Patrick Reed revisits some of the countries where he worked as a member of Doctors Without Borders in the documentary Triage.

While the term triage, which means the process of sorting victims to determine medical priority, is applicable to medicine, it's also an apt title to describe the stirring and unsettling emotional journey of Dr. James Orbinski.

Triage: Dr. James Orbinski's Humanitarian Dilemma is a powerful tale of a man whose ideals get profoundly tested by the horrific genocides he witnessed and tried to confront in Africa.

Director Patrick Reed thankfully doesn't draw a picture of someone ennobled by their experience, but instead he intelligently presents a portrait of a conflicted, courageous man whose decency was deepened when he bore witness to the worst inhumanities.

The film follows Orbinski, a Nobel Peace Prize-winning doctor, as he returns to Somalia, Rwanda and the Democratic Republic of Congo to reflect on the meaning of the relief work he did there in the nineties with Doctors Without Borders.

As he revisits those former scenes of famine and genocide, Orbinski contemplates the true value of what he accomplished. He opens up irresolvable queries about what constitutes true humanitarianism as he examines his own churning emotions.

A look at the raunchy world of dirty music

Dirty Country

Director: Joe Pickett, Nick Prueher
Classification: N/A
Rating:

ROBYN YOUNG
for Metro Canada

Larry Pierce.

REVIEW Dirty Country proves the saying true: It takes all kinds of people to make the world go round. The documentary, by Joe Pickett and Nick Prueher, is the story of one small-town musician's road to fame, told in such a compelling manner that it's easy to forget Larry Pierce's tunes aren't much more than porn set to music.

The 53-year-old is introduced as a musician who's produced about a dozen sexually explicit albums, sold at truck stops across the United States.

With song titles like She Makes My Peter Stand Up, his music is initially jarring, but the subject matter ceases to shock partway through the film when it turns into a commentary on hope and the American Dream.

Pierce is forced out of his job of 31 years as a GM factory worker around the same time his biggest fans come knocking.

Members of the rock band -itis who have their own arsenal of dirty songs, arrive at his Middletown, Ind., home and ask him to join them on stage.

His life is set on a whole new track as he transitions from playing for friends in his garage to touring with the band and eventually doing a spot on Larry Stern in New York City.

If you can get past the vulgar language, the film is good for a laugh and offers an in-your-face look at the world of dirty music — which evidently has a cult-like following.

Music journalists, authors and experts who weigh in on the scene collectively consider Pierce a legend in his own right.

And despite being, as Pierce refers to himself, "a dirty old man", it's hard not to warm to him; he's very much in love with his wife of many years and writes his tunes simply for his own enjoyment and that of his family and friends.

In town

- Dirty Country runs Sunday through Wednesday, Nov. 12, at Bloor Cinema. Larry Pierce will be in attendance, live and unplugged at the 9 p.m. showing on Sunday and Monday.

How to Break Up with a Friend

It's a fact: virtually every woman has dumped a friend at some point. It's an incredibly unpleasant experience – for the dumper and the dumpee. After all, cutting ties with a friend is the ultimate betrayal – it's mean, selfish and yet in some cases, completely necessary. Like it or not, some friendships aren't worth saving.

If you're hanging on to a fizzling friendship, it may be time to end it. But instead of icing your friend, take the high road and tell her – tactfully – that it's time to part ways.

"Women stay in bad friendships too long all the time because they don't know the difference between self-care and being self-centred. It's in our nature to soothe people and avoid hurting them," says Allison Wood, an Ottawa-based psychotherapist. "But sometimes you have to choose to let it go. It's hard to do, but you'll feel better in the long run."

Striped Pajamas story exploits the Holocaust

The Boy in the Striped Pajamas

Director: Mark Hermon
Stars: David Thewlis, Asa Butterfield
Classification: 14A
Rating:

KEVIN COURRIER
For Metro Canada

Asa Butterfield stars as Asa in The Boy in the Striped Pajamas.

Despite all the advance praise for The Boy in the Striped Pajamas describing it as "an inspirational story," there's barely an inspired moment in it. Rather, it's a calculated, obvious melodrama that exploits a powerful subject rather than illuminating it.

Director Mark Hermon (Little Voice, Brassed Off), who obviously knows a few things about cleverly manipulating viewers' emotions, takes John Boynes's best-selling novel about the Holocaust, as seen through the eyes of a young innocent boy, and treats the material as if the audience is as ignorant of its horrors as the eight-year-old.

Bruno (Asa Butterfield) is the son of a Nazi commander (David Thewlis) who moves his family from the city to the countryside where they occupy a farmhouse — which happens to sit beside Auschwitz.

Bruno views the concentration camp as a "farm" with people in "striped pajamas." But when he eventually ventures out to visit, he encounters Shmuel (Jack Scanlon), a young Jewish boy incarcerated there. Ultimately, they strike up a friendship which is inevitably jeopardized.

Where Pan's Labyrinth powerfully illustrated how a young girl, through the use of enchantment, learned to confront her naivety about the evils of fascism, The Boy in the Striped Pajamas shrewdly enshrines the boy's innocence. By not examining it, Harmon can then set up the film's emotionally powerful, yet obvious finale.

While shamelessly sacrificing authenticity (can someone tell me which concentration camp was so lax that Shmuel could idly share food and play checkers with Bruno), The Boy in the Striped Pajamas becomes nothing more than a crudely constructed tear-jerker.

Director Boyle enjoyed his Indian filming experience

PHIL BROWN
For Metro Toronto

Movie feature

Danny Boyle burst onto the international filmmaking scene after the worldwide success of Trainspotting and has been one of the most exciting filmmakers working in Britain ever since.

His latest movie, Slumdog Millionaire — out next week — is a visual feast and Bollywood fantasy about an uneducated young man who wins the Indian Who Wants To Be A Millionaire, but is forced to prove his victory when the police refuse to believe that anyone from the slums could win.

And with it being a Bollywood-influenced production, there's also a love story and musical number for good measure.

Danny Boyle

"My agent sent me the script and said it was about Who Wants To Be A Millionaire," said Boyle when asked how he got involved. "I didn't want to make a film about that because it's on the telly every week and I'm not sure if I approve of it as a show.

"But it was written by Simon Beaufoy and I thought I should read it out of respect, so I could send him a note and thank him for thinking of me. But after about 20 pages, I knew that I was going to make the film."

The movie was shot in India, which Boyle found stimulating. "Westerners take the edge off life," he said.

"But the edges are still there in India and they are exhilarating and painful. They had to drag me away at the end. I would have stayed and kept filming. I just thought there was such inspiration there as a filmmaker."

He enjoyed working in the country so much that, "on our days off I would schedule a second unit, so that I could go work with them. I wasn't interested in anything except filming every day."

The change in environment gave Boyle the ammunition to make one of his best films. He was able to play with the classic Bollywood form, while still making the project his own.

"Bollywood is filled with that rags to riches kind of stuff. But, this one also sticks to the Trainspotting mentality of Western storytelling and aggressive, inventive filmmaking for people bored with regular filmmaking."

Pick a plot, any plot: The World Unseen meanders

STEVE VEALE
For Metro Canada

The World Unseen introduces us to 1952 South Africa through the eyes of its Indian residents, but segues into a woman's personal emancipation from married subjugation with help of a liberated, gay woman.

The film starts with brutish, white police officers harassing first the country's black, then Indian residents before meandering into a simmering plotline involving an unhappy marriage between an Indian couple.

Wife Miriam is played by Toronto's Lisa Ray, and her unhappiness finally boils over following an introduction to free-thinking café owner Amina (Sheetal Seth).

The World Unseen

Director: Shamim Sarif
Stars: Lisa Ray, Sheetel Seth
Classification: STC
Rating:

A sense of liberation is eventually awakened in Miriam as she takes the first tentative steps to escape the confines of a dreary, dutiful marriage with a newfound sense of the world around her.

The World Unseen highlights the fact that novelists should beware when attempting to adapt their own works to the screen. Filmmaker Shamim Sarif both directed and wrote the screenplay from her novel.

The World Unseen

Sarif takes too long to settle on a main plot, and is obviously too attached to some of her characters — some of whom seem unnecessary to the storyline (there is a subplot involving a mixed-marriage couple that simply disappears).

The Drummer opens Asian Fest

jim.reyno@metronews.ca

This time, Kenneth Bi did get an invitation to the Toronto Reel Asian International Film Festival — a big time RSVP.

Jaycee Chan, left, stars in Kenneth Bi's The Drummer.

The Hong Kong filmmaker has the opening-gala screening at the 12th annual festival, which officially kicks off with Bi's The Drummer on Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Bloor Cinema.

That's a far cry from 2001, when Bi made his Reel Asian Fest debut with his digital film A Small Miracle.

"I didn't attend that because it was just a small film," Bi said on the phone from Hong Kong. "They didn't invite me. But my parents got to see it there, because they live in Toronto."

Bi says he's grateful A Small Miracle was even chosen for the fest — and that he's ready for the red-carpet treatment for the critically acclaimed The Drummer.

"I feel very excited," he said. "If I look back on it now, I think, 'Well, why would they pick that small, little digital film that wasn't that great? And they did, and I'm very thankful to them.

"And now they have a big film to show."

The Drummer, named Critics' Pick at the Sundance Film Festival, stars Jaycee Chan (Jackie's son) as Sid, a Hong Kong gangster's son who must flee to the mountains of Taiwan after he draws the ire of one of his father's associates. Sid, an aspiring rock drummer, becomes captivated by the Zen drummers he hears in the hills, and asks to join their troupe.

The film draws on a familiar storyline: The hotshot kid who must be educated to reach his potential, but the story runs deeper than that. Family, loyalty, violence, new-world stresses and old-world traditions are all part of the picture.

As is the skill, beauty and music of the Zen drummers. Bi first saw them perform in 2000.

"I thought I was just going to see a drumming performance … that's not what I got," said the Brock University graduate. "What I got was this whole spiritual experience that I didn't ask for but that really changed the way I looked at my whole life."

Bi studied the drummers for about four years, following them around the world and visiting their mountain retreat. The drummers in the movie are actual Zen drummers.

"On stage, they are like gods," said Bi. "When they're drumming, they're unlike anything else. But when they're offstage, they're just people. And I really wanted to know what kind of people they were … I got my answer."

Beverly Hills Chihuahua

REVIEW These days, it seems Hollywood producers are all wondering the same thing: If my dog could speak, what would it say? Well, Beverly Hills Chihuahua is the latest talking animal flick to heed that query. Featuring the voices of Drew Barrymore, Andy Garcia and other celebs, Chihuahua is a harmless "tail" about a snooty, rich lapdog that gets lost in Mexico and must journey back to Rodeo Drive.
Steve Gow/Metro Canada

Body of Lies

REVIEW In director Ridley Scott's latest film, a CIA field agent (Leonardo DiCaprio) is not only tracking down an Osama bin Laden-like terrorist leader, but he's doing so under the guidance of stay-at-home chief Ed Hoffman (Russell Crowe). Observing Ferris's moves from the eyes of unmanned spy drones, Hoffman calls the shots over a Bluetooth in America.
Steve Gow/Metro Canada

Changeling

REVIEW Directed by legendary icon Clint Eastwood, Changeling tells the emotional journey of Christine Collins (Angelina Jolie), a single mother in 1920s Los Angeles who comes home to find her son missing.

Following weeks of relentlessly searching, the police suddenly show up with her child, reporters in tow. Great. Only there's a catch: It ain't him.
Steve Gow/Metro Canada

Eagle Eye

REVIEW When Steven Spielberg first came up with the idea for Eagle Eye, it probably seemed like an outrageous science fiction story.

Now, some 10 years later — and having handed the reins over to Disturbia director D.J. Caruso — Eagle Eye may be a high-octane, car crash-filled action flick, but it hardly contains the insightfulness of what it truly needs to work.
Steve Gow/Metro Canada

Seth Rogen and Elizabeth Banks portray friends in desperate need of money in Zack and Miri Make a Porno.

Flash of Genius

REVIEW Set in the heyday of the automobile, Flash of Genius is about Robert Kearns, an eccentric college professor who — after literally getting corked in the eye — invents a new wiper.

When the Ford Motor Company shows just enough interest to get his prototype and steal the idea, Kearns must take on the auto giant to regain his dignity even though it costs him his family and, by all indication, his sanity.
Steve Gow/Metro Canada

The Haunting of Molly Hartley
●½

REVIEW The Haunting of Molly Hartley is a choppy, disjointed movie short on scares and story.

It's like they couldn't wait to make a movie, so they plowed ahead with the production without developing a plot.

The script is lazy: Stuff happens that isn't connected, you can see some events coming a mile away, and a baffling ending that explains nothing.
Jim Reyno/Metro Canada

How To Lose Friends & Alienate People

REVIEW How To Lose Friends & Alienate People comes to screens with an impeccable comedic pedigree. The script is based on a bile-filled expose of the media by self-proclaimed narcissistic twat Tony Young, the cast features such names as Simon Pegg and Jeff Bridges, and the project was directed by Curb Your Enthusiasm veteran Robert Weide. All the pieces are in place for a masterpiece of the comic faux pas … but, sadly, the film fails to deliver on its potential.
Phil Brown/Metro Canada

Igor

REVIEW This film is a tribute to all those little forgotten people in every monster movie — all those "Igors". It may appear to be a cartoon for the kids but the dialogue is quite sophisticated and a delight for adults as well. John Cusack is the voice behind Igor while Molly Shannon plays his monster.
Steve Veale/Metro Canada

Pride and Glory

REVIEW Edward Norton stars as Ray Tierney, a traumatized detective who returns to the force at the urging of his police chief father (Jon Voight) to investigate the mysterious murder of four of NYPD's finest. Exploring themes of loyalty and integrity, Ray is torn between his close-knit family and the NYPD, forced to confront his own pained morality.
Steve Gow/For Metro Canada

RocknRolla
●●●½

REVIEW Like those acclaimed crime-dramas of the late '90s, RocknRolla explores a familiar criminal element of the London underground; namely those involved in a complex real estate scam gone wrong. There are far too many subplots to summarize, but rest assured Guy Ritchie's latest features the same narrative voiceover, cleverly crooked gangsters, and super-frenetic pacing of his earliest work.
Steve Gow/Metro Canada

W.

REVIEW Perhaps the most surprising aspect of Oliver Stone's impressive film is just how rounded of a portrayal he's made of George W. Bush.

Make no mistake, Stone does not present Bush as a strong leader by any stretch of the imagination, but he does at least explain how he managed to make his many mistakes in a manner that seems plausible and disturbingly relatable.
Phil Brown/For Metro Canada

Zack and Miri Make a Porno
●●●½

REVIEW Zack And Miri Make A Porno is a very sweet romantic comedy about two best friends discovering their love for one another. Granted they discover it while having sex on camera for a quick buck — but it is very sweet nonetheless.

Summarizing the plot is pointless because the title says it all. It's also a good litmus test — if the title makes you laugh you'll probably enjoy the movie.
Phil Brown/Metro Canada

AC/DC has nowhere to hide: Johnson

CHARTS

Johnson

When Brian Johnson got news that AC/DC's new album had debuted at No. 1 in America — and in more than two dozen countries — he didn't open any champagne.

Instead, the lead singer of one of the world's biggest rock groups celebrated alone, in a modest hotel, with a plastic cup of wine and a cheese sandwich. He was preparing for a tour, which hits Toronto tonight.

"I think it typifies AC/DC basically, it's just what we're like," he says of the low-key celebration. "I guess I like it that way. We always keep our head below the radar, always have been. Now, there's nowhere to hide!"

Not that Johnson is seriously interested in taking cover after the huge success of Black Ice, the group's first studio album in eight years. The CD sold nearly 800,000 copies in its first week in the U.S., making it the second-best album debut of the year, second only to Lil Wayne.

Kings of Leon let loose

Tennessee band adds arena sound to Southern rock arsenal

BRIAN TOWIE
Metro Canada

Kings of Leon is shocked by how expensive their gigs are.

"I've seen tickets to our show that are going for as much as $415. My girl's friend bought tickets to our show on EBay and they cost her something like $300," says drummer Nathan Followill. "I asked, 'Why did you do that? I would have just put you on the guestlist.'"

The recent Stateside success of brothers Caleb, Jared, Nathan and cousin Matthew explains the high prices. Their fourth and most recent album, Only By The Night, debuted at No. 5 on the Billboard Top 200 and has sold almost as well as Coldplay's Viva La Vida.

All this amid mixed reviews: Critics, one of the most vocal being Oasis' Liam Gallagher, have slammed the band for deviating from their Southern-fried garage rock and opting for a more sexually-charged and keyboard-heavy large arena sound — arguing the rockers from Tennessee are trying to match the European success and notoriety in their native U.S. with a more polished, radio-friendly product.

"I'll say that we're not losing much sleep over what he (Gallagher) said," Followill answers. "We're just growing as a band and that's the direction we wanted to go in. We changed our production team to try new stuff that we we're too scared to try on our previous releases."

"We're just growing as a band and that's the direction we wanted to go in. We changed our production team to try new stuff that we we're too scared to try on our previous release." Nathan Followill

But the hectic touring schedule remains the same for the band, something the family act is used to. Papa Followill was a travelling Pentecostal preacher, and the brothers spent much of their youth bouncing from church to church throughout America's Bible Belt under a very Christian parental regime: No sex, no movies and absolutely no rock and roll.

After moving to Nashville in 1998, the Followill boys discovered a newfound freedom, and decided to make up for lost time with wild women, Jack Daniels, marijuana and most importantly, that loud, God-awful rock music.

"We weren't really exposed to it, so we never had too many influences growing up. Rock was the devil's music, you know?" he laughs. "But our folks are cool with it now, and they'll stay that way so long as the Christmas presents keep getting better."

Guitar hero rages on

Tom Morello shows softer side as the Nightwatchman

ROB MCMAHON
for Metro Canada

Tom Morello's Nightwatchman project bridges generations, both on record and backstage.

After playing with Rage Against the Machine, the guitarist is hanging out with older folk heroes like Billy Bragg, Steve Earle, and Shooter Jennings. Morello said those softer-sounding — but no less powerful — musicians taught him how to connect to an audience without the benefit of a loud rock band or radio hits.

"When I was touring with Billy Bragg, the audience had no idea who I was, and their average age was 50. It was a real challenge — to them, I was just another guy on the bill."

Known for his innovative guitar work and progressive politics, the Nightwatchman Morello works to capture the spirit of folk music on softer, singalong tracks like Whatever It Takes and Gone Like Rain. Dressed in a black cap, shirt, jeans and boots, he uses religious imagery and acoustic instruments to build solidarity among listeners.

"The first thing I always try to do with Rage, Audioslave, or the Nightwatchman, is to write a great song. But I also know a spoonful of sugar makes medicine go down — no one wants to listen to a college lecture set to music," he said. "The Clash, the Pogues, and Woody Guthrie — (those musicians) are all able to create solidarity in a room with music…Music, when done right, feels like the truth."

"Nightwatchman is a more intimate connection ... It's definitely a darker part of psyche and soul — definitely a part of me that believes in retribution."
Tom Morello

After experiencing the energy of 80,000 people shouting "Fuck You I Won't Do What You Tell Me" to Rage Against the Machine, Morello understands the power of musical catharsis. But unlike Rage singer Zach de la Rocha's angry polemics, his songs blend stories of everyday struggles with religious allegories inspired by liberal theologians like Bishop Desmond Tutu. This choice of material is an interesting one, given the knee-jerk connection some fans may make between Christianity and right-wing politics.

"Nightwatchman is a more intimate connection…It's definitely a darker part of psyche and soul — definitely a part of me that believes in retribution," he said. "I was raised Catholic, and for my first 13 years went to mass every Sunday…I felt a resonance with the stories [told there] and how they relate to social justice."

New, vintage vinyl for sale at the Downtown Record Show

NOELLE MUNARETTO
for Metro Canada

Vinyl aficionado Akim Boldireff is urging people to dust off their record players and organize their LPs in time for The Toronto Downtown Record Show.

Boldireff, a 20-year veteran of the vinyl business, and his partner Aaron Keele have spent the last eight years organizing record shows around the world. On Sunday, they will be bringing 50 music-related dealers from across Canada and England to Toronto's Estonian House Banquet Hall. Vendors will be offering new and vintage vinyl, as well as CDs, DVDs and music memorabilia.

"There's something for everybody at our show and that is the amazing thing," says Boldireff. "Everything from rock, jazz, rhythm and blues, to hip-hop."

Vinyl has recently enjoyed an increase in popularity, explains Boldireff and Toronto's multicultural music scene means people can source many genres on vinyl in the city.

"You can find anything here. You can't say that about most cities," he adds.

Boldireff says the show is perfect for record junkies and first time collectors alike, since items at all price points will be available. He also encourages people to take their records to the show for custom appraisals.

"If somebody wants to bring down an item because they have it in their attic and they want to know the value, we'll do it right on the spot," he says.

Above all, Boldireff says the show helps bring music lovers back to the good old days.

"Even if you don't buy anything, you're going to see stuff that's phenomenal, you're going to see a history of music," he says.

The Toronto Downtown Record Show takes place on Sunday Nov. 9 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Estonian House Banquet Hall (958 Broadview Avenue). Admission is $5.

Aaron Keele, left, and Akim Boldireff host more than 50 music-related dealers at the Toronto Downtown Record Show Sunday.

Will Obama rock or pop?

Musical trends tend to reflect decisions made by the U.S. president

SoundCheck

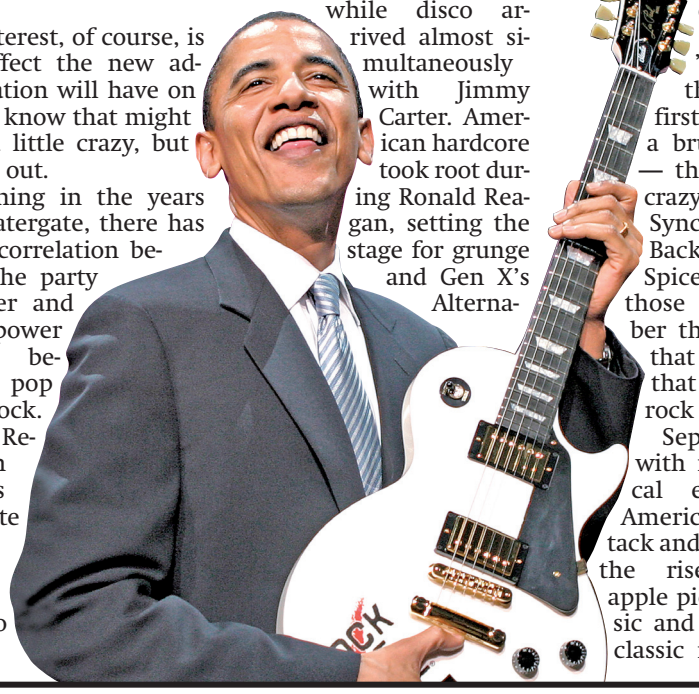
Alan Cross
alan@ongoinghistory.com

After 21 long months of campaigning, spin-doctoring and mudslinging, the American election is finally over. Between now and inauguration day, Barack Obama will get the nuclear codes, be briefed on the status of the frozen alien bodies at Area 51 and choose a White House puppy for Michelle and the kids. Meanwhile, we'll have to train our spellcheckers to stop underlining "Barack Obama" in a red squiggly line.

Why anyone would actually want to be president is beyond me, especially given the issues America faces these days. The new POTUS certainly has his challenges.

My interest, of course, is what effect the new administration will have on music. I know that might sound a little crazy, but hear me out.

Beginning in the years after Watergate, there has been a correlation between the party in power and the power struggle between pop and rock. When a Republican occupies the White House, young people tend to rebel against the policies of the administration, resulting in a resurgence in rock. Punk exploded after the disgrace of Richard Nixon while disco arrived almost simultaneously with Jimmy Carter. American hardcore took root during Ronald Reagan, setting the stage for grunge and Gen X's Alternative Nation that emerged during George H. Bush's time in power.



But when the Clintons changed the drapes in the '90s — with the end of the first Gulf War and a brutal recession — the world went crazy for pop: 'N Sync, Britney, Backstreet Boys, Spice Girls. For those who remember the last half of that decade know that many left rock for dead.

Sept. 11 came with its own musical effects. With America under attack and patriotism on the rise, Mom-and-apple pie country music and comfort food classic rock were ascendant. But by the time we got to W's second term, the public's mood had turned ugly and Green Day started selling millions of copies of American Idiot.

So does a President Obama mean that pop music will make a comeback as it has when the Democrats were in charge? Or, as Def Jam founder and producer Russell Simmons believes, will the Hip-Hop Nation take over? Could Obama's Kenyan heritage result in an uptick in interest for African rhythms and world music?

Not necessarily. There's Iraq, Afghanistan and a badly wounded economy. A lot of stuff needs to be cleaned up before America feels well enough to dance like it did in 1999.

50 cent gives big bucks

50 Cent has a new show on MTV, where business-savvy contestants compete for a shot at fame and a huge cash prize.

But the rapper says he's not following the path of that other famous reality show hosted by Donald Trump.

"Immediately, when you say a reality show that has a business spin to it, they think The Apprentice, and the difference is these people don't actually want to work for me," the 32-year-old said in a recent interview.

"They have their own business ideas that they created and they're competing for $100,000 in seed money."

50 Cent: The Money and the Power debuted last night.

The show features 14 contestants competing to show that they are the best entrepreneurs. 50 Cent will chop down the number of contestants until the winner is crowned.

Rapper 50 Cent

The rapper and mogul said the show is like a visual companion to his upcoming book, "The 50th Law," with Robert Greene, who wrote "The 48 Laws of Power."

"Ahead of my actual music taking off, I would have wanted to be on the show," he said.

"$100,000 would have been great, and the MTV exposure."

People will be seeing a lot of 50 Cent in the next few months.

Besides the MTV project, he is releasing his latest album, Before I Self Destruct, on Dec. 9. The CD includes an accompanying feature-length film with the same title.

"I'm excited, it's the first project I wrote, produced and starred in," says 50 of the flick, which comes free with the CD.

The deluxe version of the album features yet another film — this one a documentary on former mentor, Run-DMC's pioneering DJ, Jam Master Jay, who was slain in 2002.

Ellen laments ban on gay marriages

Ellen DeGeneres says she's deeply saddened by the passage of a constitutional amendment in California banning gay marriage.

The talk show host says in a statement to The Associated Press that she, like millions of Americans, felt like they had taken a giant step toward equality by electing Barack Obama as president.

DeGeneres says that with the passage of California's Proposition 8, proponents take a giant step away from the issue.

DeGeneres wed actress Portia de Rossi in August, following a May Supreme Court decision legalizing same-sex marriage in California.

She contributed $100,000 to fight the amendment on Tuesday's ballot.

DeGeneres says she'll continue to speak out for equality.

Same-sex vote

- The gay rights movement had a rough election elsewhere as well as America went to the polls on Tuesday.
- As well as California, amendments to ban gay marriage were approved in Arizona and Florida.
- And Arkansas voters approved a measure banning unmarried couples from serving as adoptive or foster parents.

Reality show continues the search for next PM

If you think you've got what it takes to run Canada, you have until Nov. 15 to get your application in.

That's the deadline for submissions to become part of CBC's Emmy-nominated TV reality show Canada's Next Great Prime Minister.

Candidates must be between the ages of 18 and 25 and have ideas on how to make Canada a stronger country socially, economically and politically.

The 2007 winner, Quebec native Joseph Lavoie, went on to become a consultant with Navigator Ltd., a national affairs public research firm, and is spokesperson for former prime minister Brian Mulroney.

The 2006 winner, Sudbury, Ont.-born Deirdra McCracken has been a press secretary for federal Conservative cabinet minister Jim Prentice. Prentice now holds the environment portfolio.

The show is based on a competition started in 1995 by Frank Stronach, the founder and chairman of Magna International.

Stronach said he designed the reality series in order to engage young people in the political process.

He said he wanted to encourage Canada's youth to think about ways to improve the country.

To be considered

- To enter, candidates must upload their ideas online on YouTube at youtube.com/nextprimeminister.
- The winner will receive a prize of $50,000.

Wahler loses legal battle

COURT A jury says former Laguna Beach personality Jason Wahler owes a tow truck driver $5,000 in damages for a confrontation more than two years ago.

The jury decided yesterday that Wahler committed battery on Dario Stevenson.

The driver said Wahler punched him in the face and hurled racial slurs at him and other blacks during a fight in September 2006.

Wahler, who also appeared on The Hills, acknowledged testimony that he used racial slurs. Jurors rejected justifications by Wahler's lawyer that his client was defending his girlfriend.

Stevenson may receive punitive damages but the amount awarded is likely to be less than the $1 million he sought.

Triple the laughs in new HBO show

Comedian portrays teacher, troublemaker, snob in imported Aussie hit

As you watch Chris Lilley playing all three leads in his new mockumentary series about an Australian high school, you can expect to have three responses.

First, you're amazed that, even as a stunt, he would dare to try this repertoire of roles.

Then, quickly enough, you notice how comfortably he channels each personality: An unruly misfit named Jonah; a snooty 16-year-old named Ja'mie; and Mr. G, the show-off drama teacher.

Then you simply forget that one gifted actor has brought these characters to life, and done it by pure force of performing (Lilley abstains from fancy costume and make-up effects, even in depicting Ja'mie, which is a pretty good trick since she's not only a girl, but also a self-declared hottie).

The mythical school where this trio of tales is set lends its name to Summer Heights High, an eight-part series created and written by Lilley. A hit last year in his native Australia, it premieres Sunday on HBO at 10:30 p.m.

The series is richly funny as it makes the most of its "documentary" framework: Subjects discuss themselves for the camera, then are soon contradicted when the camera catches them in "candid" behaviour. Self-delusion is epidemic at this school, where Mr. G reckons he's an inspirational figure, however narcissistic his song-and-dance demonstrations, and where even Ja'mie's tossed-off pleasantries betray her meanness ("Oh, you've got wheelchair people! That's so cute!").

"We got a few funny looks: 'What is the tranny doing in our school?'"
Chris Lilley on students' reaction to his portrayal of a 16-year-old girl

To play Ja'mie, who arrives as an exchange student from her posh private girls school, "I knew I wanted there to be a contrast between this girl who everyone thinks is wonderful and amazing but who's really nasty and selfish," Lilley says.

Lilley created Mr. G during a stint as a stand-up comic. Now the character is in full flower as a small-time spectacle of oversized ego who composes a song for the student musical celebrating his own presumed virtuosity.

To flesh out the characters, Lilley spent months embedded in numerous schools, gathering material and soaking up the atmosphere.

"I wanted to make sure I was very current. I didn't want the show to be an old person's perspective," he says. (Lilley, who turns 34 on Monday, has a cherubic face and bright blue eyes that make him look at least a decade younger.)

"You have ideas that you just want to confirm," he goes on. "You write a scene about a staff meeting, but you want to sit in on a staff meeting, and make sure all the details are right."

Assisted by Lilley's eye for detail, Summer Heights High feels oddly authentic and convincing, and it packs more than laughs. It has a poignant, even painful side.

This is thanks mostly to Jonah. Here, at his third school in 18 months, he emerges as the series' truly sympathetic figure — notwithstanding his propensity for F-bombs, rowdiness and defacing property.

Jonah's lewd graffiti "tag" became a conspicuous part of the redecorating scheme at the shooting location, Brighton Secondary College in suburban Melbourne.

"It's a quite nice-looking place," says Lilley, "but I was very keen to make it appear that it was a lower-income school. So we made it look quite ugly."

Classes were in session during the three-month shoot, with Brighton students in non-speaking parts.

At first, Ja'mie raised some eyebrows in the hallways.

Judge wants to see Rather papers

COURT A New York City judge says he wants to see documents that passed between a law firm and a panel CBS hired to investigate a Dan Rather story on U.S. President George W. Bush.

Judicial Hearing Officer Ira Gammerman has told attorney David Versfelt to let him examine the papers so he can decide whether Rather's lawyers may see them.

Versfelt's law firm was hired to advise the panel. CBS hired the panel to investigate a disputed 2004 60 Minutes II story about Bush's military service.

Rather says he was removed from the evening news anchor chair and given little to do after the story. He is suing CBS for $70 million. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vampire drama signalling HBO resurgence?

IntelleVision

rick.mcginnis@metronews.ca

THAT'S A LOT OF GOTHS AND ANNE RICE FANS: After a slow start, HBO's Sexy! Fresh! Young! vampire drama True Blood has been picking up steam. According to a story in Broadcasting & Cable magazine, the most recent episode drew 2.35 million live viewers, which when aggregated with replays, delayed viewers and their DVRs, as well as HBO On Demand customers, comes to a whopping 6.4 million viewers – a big improvement from the scant 1.44 million live viewers who tuned into the season premiere.

So — a promising upturn in HBO's sagging fortunes, or have the kids with the white pancake makeup and kohl around their eyes become managers at the comic store and started splurging on deluxe cable and TiVos? Only time will tell.

PLEASE DON'T GIVE THE CRTC ANY IDEAS: Little House On The Prairie, the NBC show based on the Laura Ingalls Wilder books that ran for over a decade in the '70s and '80s, is a hit in syndication in Finland, according to a Reuters story. Having lived through the show's prime-time run, that would mean that there are a lot of little girls in Helsinki with a fondness for gingham and an abiding misconception that there were rolling hills and mountains in the near distance on the Minnesota prairie.

It's apparently common practice for Finnish authorities to charge 2 euros (about $3) for every minute of footage they have to watch to rate a show's age limit. NBC Universal considered this extortionate, considering the length of the show's run, and decided to forego official vetting, which meant that the show's DVD box sets are sold with a sticker stating that they're banned for viewers under 18 – who can watch it every Sunday morning on the state-run broadcaster.

"OBI-WAN, YOU'RE MY ONLY HOPE": It took 25 HD cameras set up in a ring around CNN correspondent Jessica Yellin and twenty computers to crunch the data necessary to generate that lame hologram thing they did on election night. All so college kids could put bagels over their ears and make Princess Leia jokes before trashing the McCain/Palin signs outside that frat down the street.

Camilla Scott aims to rock Toronto crowd

THEATRE Camilla Scott has played parts that were originated by the likes of Doris Day, Patti LuPone and Grace Kelly. But never before has she followed in the footsteps of Adam Brazier.

Yet that's exactly what's happening at the Panasonic Theatre, where We Will Rock You continues to play to packed houses of people who can't get enough of the music of Queen.

Scott has taken over the role of Khashoggi, the evil henchman to the Killer Queen in Ben Elton's dystopian fantasy about a world where live rock music is illegal.

"I said, 'Well, I've got a little hair on my chest; I think I'd be good.' "
Camilla Scott on singing Queen songs

It's a part that has always been played by a man, with the brawny Brazier as the role's most recent inhabitant.

So how did Scott react to a call from Mirvish Productions asking her if she'd take on the challenge?

"I said, 'Well, I've got a little hair on my chest; I think I'd be good.' Seriously, I miss stage work, I've been doing too much film and TV."

Strange as it may seem, the vocal requirements of the songs present no problem to Scott at all.

"Freddie Mercury's voice was so high for a man," she explains, "that all of his songs sit really well in a woman's chest voice. So I sing them in the same key as the guys ... I just belt the crap out of them!"

Scott has always been known as a straight-ahead, take-no-prisoners kind of gal. It's something she started early on in life.

One day she heard that the soap opera Days of Our Lives was looking for a young actress who could sing. Scott crashed her way into the casting office.

"Sing something," the woman behind the desk commanded. Momentarily flummoxed, Scott thought of the last song she had heard on the car radio and immediately broke into her best Whitney Houston.

She started filming the next day and stayed on the series for two years.

Scott came back to Canada to star in Crazy for You with the Mirvish organization.

Lots of Grade A credits followed, but they all paled beside finally marrying actor Paul Eves in 2002 after decades of dating.

When she asked him why they waited so long, he said, "I'll ask you when I'm ready ... You can't be in charge of everything."

Their son Jack followed in 2005. Scott admits, "It's nice not to be the most important person in your own life any more."

• We Will Rock You — with Camilla Scott — is on at the Panasonic Theatre until Jan. 4.

Comedians from hit show Video On Trial go live

NOELLE MUNARETTO
for Metro Canada

Canadian comedians Debra DiGiovanni, Trevor Boris and Sabrina Jalees will be performing a special live comedy show on Sunday, Nov. 9, in honour of the 100th episode of MuchMusic's hit series Video On Trial.

The show will be held at the Panasonic Theatre, and will feature other Video On Trial comedians on-stage together for the first time.

"For fans of the show who have never seen standup, this will be a great introduction to us," says Trevor Boris, a producer and regular guest for Video On Trial.

Debra DiGiovanni is also a comedian on the show.

She says the audience can look forward to a night filled with celebrity bashing, Video On Trial clips that never made it to air, and montages of the show's memorable moments.

"I'm really excited 'cause I think it's going to be a lot of fun," says DiGiovanni.

She says the show will be "a really nice way to bridge Video On Trial with live comedy."

DiGiovanni and Boris credit Video On Trial's success to the fact it was MuchMusic's first show to feature a panel of comedians tearing apart popular music videos.

"People love mocking. Celebrities are placed on such a huge pedestal and people like taking them down a notch."
Comedian Trevor Boris

"People love mocking," Boris says. "Celebrities are placed on such a huge pedestal and people like taking them down a notch."

Boris says their live show will also help highlight great Canadian comedic talent.

"It's going to be the best comedy show in the history of comedy. Not that I'm overselling it at all," he adds candidly.

The show titled Comedians of Video On Trial will run at the Panasonic Theatre.

Tickets cost $26 to $32 and are available at www.ticketking.com or by phone at 416-872-1212.

Swift pens song about breakup with Jonas Bro.

RELATIONSHIPS Taylor Swift is opening up for the first time about her breakup with Joe Jonas — and she's even singing about it on her new album, People.com reports.

"(It's) a song about watching somebody completely fade away in a relationship and wondering what you did wrong," Swift, 18, says about Forever and Always, a track inspired by her October split with Jonas, 19. The song appears on her new album Fearless, due Nov. 11.

Swift also says she's not ready to date again and prefers being alone — for now.

"I would hate to jump into something so quickly and have it not be the right thing, because I don't think I could take that right now," she says.

During their summer romance, neither Swift nor Jonas would admit they were dating. But on Wednesday, Swift finally confirmed that they were a couple, and said Jonas is the only guy who's ever hurt her "deeply."

"It's been tough," she said while chatting with Ryan Seacrest on his KIIS-FM radio show. "You just have to try to realize someday you'll find someone that's right for you."

On-off McGosling hits the rocks again

BREAKUP Ryan Gosling and Rachel McAdams' on-off romance is off again, just four months after they sealed their reunion with a public kiss, imdb.com reports.

The pair began dating first time around after meeting on the set of 2004 movie The Notebook.

They split in 2007, but reconciled in July and were soon spotted smooching at a restaurant in Toronto.

But friends claim the relationship has hit the rocks again.

"They broke up the first time because of their busy schedules and that's the problem again," a source tells Us Weekly.

Kidman felt stifled by Cruise

RELATIONSHIPS Nicole Kidman reportedly felt stifled during her 10-year marriage to Tom Cruise, and only became an individual when they split in 2001, imdb.com reports.

The actress claims she was never considered a star in her own right, and was treated as an extension to the Top Gun actor.

Just two years after her divorce from Cruise, Kidman cemented her status on Hollywood's A-list by lifting the Best Actress Oscar for her role in The Hours — and she admits she flourished after the split.

"I felt I became a star only by association. I felt it was my job to put on a beautiful dress and be seen and not heard," Kidman, who is now married to country star Keith Urban, tells the December issue of America's Glamour magazine.

Driver's baby's daddy left after news of pregnancy?

RELATIONSHIPS Actress Minnie Driver has been trying to keep the identity of her baby's daddy a secret, but if Page Six's sources are correct, the father of her son, Henry, is someone in the industry.

Driver "was dating a TV writer," one source told Page Six. "She told him she was pregnant, and he just left her. That's why she's been very quiet about the situation."

Rocker Craig Zolezzi, who previously dated Driver, has been suggested in the past to be the child's father.

Celeb marriages never work out, Cowell says

DATING American Idol judge Simon Cowell has explained the reason for his recent split with girlfriend Terri Seymour: he is convinced celebrity marriages never work, imdb.com reports.

The couple dated for more than six years, but Seymour ended the relationship two months ago over Cowell's refusal to settle down and start a family.

The music mogul insists that the split was inevitable, because he will never prioritize his personal life over his job.

"She wants a different path in life, and I totally respect her for it," he tells Fox News. "Bottom line is I am married to my job. When people moan about being a celebrity, I think 'Oh please, sort yourself out — it's the greatest job in the world.' I wake up daily thanking my lucky stars, but to throw marriage into that mix is not right. I have seen too many celebrity marriages that on paper make a great mix, fall apart through ego and just plain celebrity madness."

Meeting mom 'stressful': Biel

DATING Actress Jessica Biel had a "tricky" first meeting with her boyfriend Justin Timberlake's mother, insisting she found the affair "stressful," imdb.com reports.

Biel has been dating the singer since last year and admits she was nervous when she was first introduced to his mum, Lynn Harless.

"It always is a stressful situation. You are always trying, without trying too hard, to be likeable," Biel says. "You know mothers and sons and fathers and daughters — those are very protective bonds. So anyone going into that has a tricky situation."

Pressly and Cubiche take a break

BREAKUP Jaime Pressly and her fiancé, Eric Cubiche, who are parents to a 1 ½-year-old son, have separated, the My Name is Earl star reveals, People.com reports.

"We are taking a break from our relationship but we are together every day with Dezi and still love each other very much," the actress tells Access Hollywood's Nancy O'Dell.

The couple, who welcomed their son, Dezi James, in May 2007, plan to "remain close friends as we both adore our son and want to make sure he knows we both love him more than life," Pressly adds.

'I overdid the face filler': Lisa Rinna

BEAUTY Actress Lisa Rinna is opening the lid on a big Hollywood secret by confessing that she had too much of the filler Juvéderm injected into her face, intouchweekly.com reports.

"We all know everyone does it!" Rinna, 45, tells In Touch. "We go on Jenny Craig and do all these things to change ourselves, so why can't we get a little filler?"

But while a little is one thing, Rinna admits she recently overdid it.

"I saw a picture of myself and thought, 'Uh-oh,'" Rinna said, after getting too much Juvéderm. "You have to be careful. I'm a perfect example of that!"

"There are many things you can do to make yourself look better," says Rinna, whose fitness DVDs Lisa Rinna: Dance Body Beautiful are out in December.

Madonna begs 'bosom buddy' Paltrow to move to N.Y.: Report

FRIENDS Pop star Madonna has reportedly begged actress Gwyneth Paltrow to move to New York, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Following her split from husband Guy Ritchie, Madonna is planning to quit London and relocate to the Big Apple after her Sticky and Sweet world tour finishes next month.

Madonna has relied on Paltrow — who primarily lives in London with husband Chris Martin and their two children — for support since separating from the film director, and wants her to follow her to New York.

"Madonna and Gwyneth are bosom buddies. Gwyneth was a rock to Madonna while she was considering whether to leave Guy, she had strong views on the situation," a source close to the star told Britain's The Sun newspaper.

"They were in constant contact during the difficult period and Madonna really valued Gwyneth's advice.

"Madonna is desperately sad to be leaving one of her best friends behind and has been urging her to join her in New York."

Jolie gets fit with Wii

LIFE Actress Angelina Jolie has been using her children's video games to lose weight, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Jolie, who raises six kids with partner Brad Pitt, has been burning off her post-pregnancy pounds with a Nintendo Wii.

The video game console requires players to use their body to control their games' characters.

"Angelina's kids were convincing her that video games were more than just fun.

"They explained to her you can do anything from practise math to learn to read music and exercise," a source said.

"She tries to get in an hour of Pilates three times a week. She's picking it up pretty quickly and is already at the hardest setting!"

'Something seriously wrong' with people who wear fur: Leona Lewis

OPINIONS Singer Leona Lewis has reportedly said people who wear fur have "something seriously wrong with them," femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Lewis, who is a staunch vegetarian, can't understand why anyone would want to wear a coat made from animal skin.

"I can't begin to imagine that people who know all these animals have been killed to make a coat can still wear it," she said. "There must be something seriously wrong with them."

Manson and Wood split over her live-in brother?

BREAKUP Marilyn Manson has been dumped by his actress girlfriend Evan Rachel Wood, according to reports.

The couple split after a bitter argument over 21-year-old Wood's brother Ira, who had been living with the celebrity pair, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Sources claim 39-year-old Manson tried to throw Ira out of the guest house at the Hollywood home he shares with his girlfriend.

"Evan owned the house and didn't want her unemployed sibling living on the street. It was the tipping point," an insider said.

Wood and Manson began dating in December 2006.

Hefty Jackson's diet book cut

BOOK DEAL Janet Jackson's plans to release a diet book have been shelved, because the singer has piled on the pounds, femalefirst.co.uk reports media as saying.

Jackson had signed a deal to share her weight-loss secrets with fans after shedding 60 pounds in just four months in 2006.

But sources claim the pop superstar has added pounds during her current Rock Witchu tour, prompting her publishing bosses to back out of the deal.

"It has been postponed indefinitely. It was a mutual decision," an insider tells the National Enquirer.

Diaz wouldn't share cigarettes, partygoers say

LIFE Actress Cameron Diaz reportedly upset guests by refusing to share her cigarettes at a party, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

Diaz, who was attending a lavish Halloween bash hosted by her close friend Drew Barrymore at her Hollywood Hills, Calif., home, managed to annoy other partygoers by spending most of the evening smoking.

"Cameron was outside smoking the whole time, but when a couple of people asked if she had a cigarette, she always said no. It was so rude," a source told the New York Post newspaper.

Recipe of the day

Cream of leek and potato soup

INGREDIENTS:
1 tbsp (15 mL) olive oil
8 oz (225 g) leeks, white part only, thickly sliced
1 large onion, coarsely chopped
6 cups (1.5 L) homemade or canned low-sodium chicken or vegetable stock
450 lb (450 g) potatoes, peeled and diced
1 pinch freshly ground white pepper
1/3 cup (75 mL) low-fat sour cream
Snipped fresh chives to garnish

METHOD:
1. In a large saucepan, heat oil over moderate heat. Stir in leeks and onion with 3/4 cup (175 mL) stock. Cover and cook, stirring frequently, until softened but not browned, About 10 minutes.
2. Add potatoes to saucepan and stir to coat with leek and onion mixture.
3. Pour in half of remaining stock and bring to a boil. Partly cover, then simmer for 15 to 20 minutes or until potatoes are soft.
4. Remove from heat. Ladle into a blender or food processor and purée.
5. Pour remaining stock into the pan. Add vegetable purée and bring to a simmer, stirring constantly. Season with white pepper.
6. Remove from heat and stir in sour cream. Ladle into bowls and garnish with snipped chives.
